Let's Learn to Tell Time

Learning to tell time is a fun part of growing up! We've created this booklet of worksheets and flashcards to assist families as their children begin learning to read clocks, whether wall clocks or digital clocks.

Teaching children to tell time wasn't as daunting as I had once thought, and as it turned out, it was harder finding a wall clock to teach on. :) In our home, we begin teaching our little ones to read digital clocks first. For one, that's what we have, and two, they already recognize the numbers.

On digital clocks, begin by teaching the hours first. Try to time your lessons around the hours, so your child can see what each one looks like - 1:00, 2:00, 3:00... Whenever opportunity allows, point out the minutes within the hour. Even little ones that might not recognize the number 37 at first will begin to pick up on how numbers build upon themselves.

On wall clocks, again, teach the hours first. Next, move on to the quarter after, then half hour, and finally quarter til sections of time. After that, begin to point out clocks whenever you see them, telling your child what time it says, or ask them to tell you.

You'll soon be enjoying having a child able to run into the other room to 'tell Mommy/ Daddy' what time it is. I guess I should also warn you that the same excited little pupil will eagerly tell you when you are ever running late for something. :)
