

A bronze bull's head with large, curved horns, serving as a sacred vessel. The head is highly detailed with intricate patterns and designs, particularly around the eyes and the base of the horns. The horns are a light brown color, contrasting with the dark bronze of the head. The entire object is set against a black background.

EARLY GREECE

A sacred vessel in the form of a bull's head, found at the palace of Knossos, Crete